Newcomers Guide to Calgary

Welcome to Calgary

Visit calgary.ca to find out more about living, working and getting around in Calgary.

Important phone numbers

311 For City information or to request a service within Calgary city limits. Examples of when to call 311:

- Report snow and ice concerns
- Report non-working streetlamps
- Noise complaints

311 offers language translation services in more than 200 languages. If you state the name of your language in English, a translator will be provided.

911 For emergencies related to health, safety and property. This includes medical distress, fires, crimes in progress and motor vehicle accidents where an ambulance/tow truck is necessary. It's important to teach all family members about when to call 911. Even if a caller can only say "fire," "police" or "help," emergency assistance will be sent. It's also important to know your location or address when phoning 911. A person's location is not always automatically known so it is often the most important piece of information needed to get help in an emergency. Translation services available.

211 For information about community or social resources available in Calgary. This includes financial, social, food and mental health support. Free and confidential and translation services available. Visit informalberta.ca for more information.

811 Health Link: For health advice and health information services provided by a registered nurse. The nurse may not be able to diagnose your illness but will tell you if you should seek medical treatment or try treatment at home. Translation services available.

Getting around Calgary

By train

The City of Calgary offers CTrain service with two main lines – a Red line running north-south and a Blue line running east-west. The CTrain is free downtown – simply hop on at any stop along 7th Ave. As long as you get off the train before leaving downtown, no fare is required.

By bus

Bus service is available throughout the city and connects with the CTrain line. To find your route, Calgary Transit has a website and app where you can select your origin and destination to find where you are going. You can find the schedule online at calgarytransit.com

Transit fares

Bus and CTrain fares are the same throughout the city, no matter where you are going. Discounted fares are available for children, students and seniors. You can purchase tickets from vending machines that accept coins, credit and debit cards located at all CTrain stations. To pay for your fare on the bus you will need exact change. If you know you will be using transit often, you can buy a book of tickets or a monthly pass at select retailers or at calgarytransit.com

Transfers

If you need to take a combination of bus routes and/or the CTrain to get to your destination, remember to ask your bus driver for a transfer or hold on to your validated ticket from your CTrain journey. The transfer is valid for the next 90 minutes.

By taxi

Calgary's taxi and limousines are regulated by The City of Calgary. When taking taxis, it's important to plan ahead and consider peak periods. Look for a taxi plate on the rear bumper to ensure you're taking a licensed taxi. Be aware of the taxi company, vehicle colour and phone number in case you need to track down lost items or share a compliment or concern about your ride. You can pay your taxi fare by cash, credit or debit cards.
